American Freedom Foundation Raises Over $100,000 For Veteran Organizations During Festival

Washington D.C. – On November 10, the American Freedom Foundation (AFF) held a concert at Constitution Hall that helped raise over $100,000 for Veteran organizations.

“Homes For Our Troops” and “Operation Second Chance” each were awarded $25,000 to help further their on going efforts in rebuilding the lives of veterans returning from duty overseas.

“To receive such a generous gift is just an incredible experience,” says Cindy McGrew, President and Founder of Operation Second Chance. “We will be able to help so many soldiers with this donation and truly help improve their lives.”

“It makes me feel so good to help these military families, who are in need of our support,” says retired Sergeant Major of Army and Co-Chairman of the AFF, Jack L. Tilley. “With over 20,000 wounded troops, we want to do our part to assist and I hope this event spurs others to join. The American Freedom Festival was a wonderful concert and a great way to raise this money.”

The American Freedom Festival featured country musicians Mark Wills, Darryl Worley and Rodney Atkins, along with many other talents who performed at Constitution Hall for over 2000 fans and military veterans. The Foundation looks to bring this event back to Washington, DC next year for Veterans Day.

The American Freedom Foundation, Inc. is a 501(c)3 public benefit corporation organized to honor veterans of America's armed forces and raise money and awareness for various veterans' organizations with special emphasis directed to welfare and educational issues facing those wounded in action, amputees and families and children of veterans killed in action during Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.
